And Brown Took Game—Great Fight
for Place in League Continues
—Boston Nationals
Won.

Boston, Sept. 22.—In the first game of the Boston Americans' double header with St. Louis at the Huntington Avenue grounds this afternoon, the home team played with some of their old time form and succeeded in shutting out the visitors and getting two runs themselves on account of two errors by Gleason.

The tables, however, were turned in the second game, by St. Louis, when in the ninth inning with the score 0 to 0 and two men out and two on bases, Jones got a safe hit, scoring Wallace.

The batteries in the first game were for Boston, Winter and Armbruster; for St. Louis, Powell and Suggen. In the second game, Harris and Criger for the Champions and Howell and Spencer for St. Louis.

Under Southern Skies.

It has been the aim of the manager of "Under Southern Skies," and the insistent demand of Lottie Blair Parker, author of the play, to secure young and beautiful women who typify the famed beauty of the women of the South. Much care has been taken in this matter and a lovelier bevy of femininity would be hard to find than that which will grace our local stage when the famous success, "Under Southern Skies," is presented in Barre at the opera house next Monday evening. One of the features of "Under Southern Skies" will be the rendition, by a sextette of trained voices, of the old plantation melodies that were famous a generation ago and which today are as popular as ever, judging from the heartiness of the applause which they evoke.

WINTHROP ON THE STAND

Financial Secretary of Equitable Before Investigators.

JACOB SCHIFF TO TESTIFY

Morgan to Be Summoned—Buckner Explains Exhaustively the "Nylle"
System of Compensation and Bonuses.

New York, Sept. 23.—H. Rogers Winthrop, financial secretary of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was the first witness called by the legislative insurance investigation committee yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Hughes, chief counsel for the committee, said before the meeting that Jacob H. Schiff would be called upon to testify and might possibly be summoned during the afternoon. Earlier in the day he said he would also call J. Pierpont Morgan if he found it necessary. Mr. Morgan, if a witness, will be asked to tell what he knows about the bond dealings between his firm and the New York Life, with special reference to George W. Parker's connection with both concerns.

Before Mr. Winthrop took the stand, Mr. Hughes announced that a letter had been received from ex-President Grover Cleveland, explaining the working agreement among the trustees of the Equitable, Justice O'Brien, George Westinghouse, and himself.

Thomas A. Buckner, fourth vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, was the principal witness yesterday forenoon. Mr. Buckner's testimony was interrupted for a moment only when Chief Inspector Hughes called to the stand Henry Dempsey, of the Citizens' National Bank, of this city, to identify the accounts which "Judge" Andrew Hamilton had with that bank. After the identification of the Hamilton accounts by Mr. Dempsey, Mr. Hughes continued to question Mr. Buckner, who is head of the agency department of the New York Life.

Much of Mr. Buckner's time was spent in explaining the two Nylle associations. The original Nylle society, Mr. Buckner said, was instituted on Jan. 1, 1896, and consisted of a new system of rewarding insurance solicitors over and above the compensation for securing the original policy.

WANTS THAT $48,000.

Oyster Bay Caller Seeks the N. Y. Life's Campaign Contribution.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 23.—A man, who refused to disclose his name, but said that he had "walked all the way from Brooklyn to see the president on a matter of the greatest importance," ascended the winding roadway to Sagamore Hill at 5:45 yesterday morning. "I want to get that $48,000 the New York Life Insurance company gave the Republican National Committee," explained the dust-covered stranger. "The president will pay it over to me as soon as he knows that I am here to receive it."

The pedestrian also said that he had decided to assume the duties of the secretary of agriculture, as "Mr. Wilson is to be let out on account of the cotton scandal."

Secret Service Detectives Burns and Brzezinski told the early caller that the president did not receive visitors before 9 a. m., and he started back toward the village, promising to return later in the day.

Too Much for the Law.

"Say, Judge," said Jim Furry, after he had been sentenced to be hanged on the outskirts of the camp for horse stealing. "If there's any technicalities in the law that I happen to think of I s'pose I kin take advantage of them, can't I?"

"Sartin you kin, Jim, though I reckon you won't find many in your case."

"Mebbe not, but will you do me a favor?"

"If I kin Jim I'm allus willin' to favor the condemned up to a sartin pint." "Wal, then, sentence me to be hung at 10 o'clock in the forenoon with a rope."

"I'll do it. Jest consider that the hour and that ye are to be choked to death with a rope. I never heard of anybody bein' hung with anything else."

There was much amusement after court adjourned about Jim finding technicalities in the law, but his remarks were not fully understood till the next day. They for the first time the boys began to look around for a rope, but after half an hour's hunt it was found that there wasn't an inch of rope in the camp. The nearest town was 20 miles away, but Jim stopped anyone from going there by saying:

"Gentlemen, I was to be hung at 10 o'clock, and it is past the hour now. I demand to be set at liberty."

"And this is technicality?" queried the judge with a blank face.

"She be, sir—two of 'em, and I stand on both. Joe Thomas stole all the rope in camp last night and hid it, and if ye hang me with anything else it'll be illegal."

There was an awkward and embarrassing silence, and then the crowd began to back Jim up, and the judge saw that the points were well taken and said:

"Jim, you've shorley got the bulge on the crowd this time, and I'm going to turn you loose and ax ye to drink with us. That's plain law, jest as I give you. Then the crowd is going to give in line and each one help to boot you out of town. That's a technicality, same as ax worked on us. Cast the prison loose and prepare to drink and kick."—Minneapolis Tribune.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Remedy that "Kills the Dandruff Germ."

SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Every school child should know that BALDNESS IS A CONTAGIOUS DISEASE, CAUSED BY A MICROBE. Prof. Unna of Hamburg, Germany, discovered that dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and final baldness are produced by a germ or microbe that passes from one head to another, where it burrows into the scalp and by multiplying and extending deeper and deeper into the hair follicles, saps the life of the hair and produces baldness.

IT TAKES YEARS

to produce complete baldness, for the action of the dandruff microbe is not constant in every case. It is governed by predisposition, by state of health, by environment, but particularly by the endeavor made to combat the growth and development of the dandruff microbes, which can only be destroyed with Newbro's Herpicide.

This new antiseptic scalp germicide is past experimental stage. It was made to destroy the germ that causes dandruff and falling hair, and, by coaxing energy back into the impoverished bulbs, it enables the hair to grow naturally and luxuriantly. Thousands of letters from physicians, clergymen and laymen tell the same story of its wonderful success.

"DESTROY THE CAUSE—YOU REMOVE THE EFFECT."

TO STUDY INDIAN LIFE.

Scientist and Explorer Visiting Tribes in Tepic, Mexico.

Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith, the scientist and explorer of Salem, who recently had a memorable experience trying to reach the summit of Mount Colima volcano, left Mexico City, Mexico, recently for the wilds of the territory of Tepic. There he will make his home for a few weeks with the Cora and Huichol tribes of Indian who inhabit that remote region, when he will make a careful study of their chief characteristics. He also will make attempts to climb to the summit of the Caborcero volcano.

When he made the ascent of the mountain he was accompanied by a guide, and they camped at a point between the Colima volcano and the Nevado de Colima, at an altitude of 11,000 feet. One day was spent in attempting to reach the crater of the volcano, and later he climbed the Nevado de Colima to within 100 feet of the crest. In all six days were spent by Dr. Goldsmith on the mountains, and during the entire time the volcano was comparatively quiet, only a small volume of vapor issuing from the crater. He believes the Colima volcano to be at least 13,500 feet high, and estimates that the crater is more than one-half mile in diameter. The Nevado de Colima, he says, is more than 15,000 feet high. Maps of Mexico give the height of the volcano as less than 13,000 feet, and that of the Nevado a less than 15,000. While on the mountains Dr. Goldsmith secured nearly 100 photographs, none of which will be developed until he reaches home. Dr. Goldsmith declares that the vapor which issues from the craters at different places along the sides of the volcano, and presumably that which issues from the crater, has a very offensive odor, like a combination of swamp and mud, burning rubber and sulfur. He states that the ascent of the mountain is made dangerous by a great quantity of false rock, which covers the sides. The rock gives way and disintegrates under the weight of a man. He found absolutely no lava. He succeeded in reaching a point within 1,000 feet of the crater, and was there forced to abandon the project for the reason that he was unable to climb precipitous rocks. Dr. Goldsmith is now inclined to doubt the stories that are told of men having looked over the rim of the crater in the past.

While on the San Marcos hacienda and on the mountains Dr. Goldsmith gathered a great number of insect and plant specimens. After leaving the mountains he went to the city of Colima and continued his collections there. The specimens are destined for Harvard, the University of Pennsylvania and the Peabody Museum at Salem. Dr. Goldsmith expects to return north the latter part of this month. His Colima experiences probably will be given in a course of lectures to Harvard students.—Boston Transcript.

LET'S BURGLARS WORK.

Nephew of Justice Dickey Sees Uncle's House Looted.

New York, Sept. 23.—The nephew of the late Supreme Court Justice Dickey at Bath Beach was entered and ransacked by burglars early yesterday morning, and silverware and jewelry valued at about $1,000 were stolen.

Warren Deyo, a nephew of the judge, who is visiting his uncle, was in bed, and saw the burglars, and watched them at work, but, fearing that he would be attacked, made no effort to hinder them or raise an outcry. Deyo had in mind the fate of a friend of Justice Dickey's who was shot by burglars who entered his house in a similar manner. He said his uncle had advised him never to interfere with burglars at work.

Deyo did not give the alarm even until two hours after the men had left the house.
